

Announcing a new series

NEW PERSPECTIVES FOR ENGLISH FOR ACADEMIC PURPOSES

SERIES EDITORS:

Alex Ding (University of Leeds, UK) | Ian Bruce (The University of Waikato, New Zealand)
Melinda Whong (Hong Kong University of Science and Technology, Hong Kong)

ADVISORY BOARD:

Jigang Cai (Fudan University, China)
Nigel Caplan (University of Delaware, USA)
Greg Hadley (Niigata University, Japan)
Nigel Harwood (University of Sheffield, UK)
Carole MacDiarmid (University of Glasgow, UK)
Jennifer MacDonald (Dalhousie University, Canada)
Geoffrey Nsanja (University of Malawi, The Polytechnic, Malawi)

Brian Paltridge (The University of Sydney, Australia)
Diane Pecorari (The City University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong)
Nadežda Silaški (University of Belgrade, Serbia)
Christine Tardy (University of Arizona, USA)
Jackie Tuck (Open University, UK)

This series sets the agenda for studies in English for Academic Purposes (EAP) by opening up research and scholarship to new domains, ideas and perspectives as well as giving a platform to emerging and established practitioners and researchers in the field.

The volumes in this series are innovative in that they broaden the scope of theoretical and practical interests in EAP by focusing on neglected or new areas of interest, to provide the EAP community with a deeper understanding of some of the key issues in teaching EAP across the world and in diverse contexts.

Plans for volumes in the series include:

- focusing on innovative pedagogies of teaching EAP;
- examining the value of sociological theories as lenses for better understanding of the roots of EAP to better equip EAP in all of its diverse contexts;
- researching the impact of policies and politics on language education in higher education;
- exploring the identity and agency of EAP practitioners, students and managers in turbulent times across the globe;
- investigating the transitions (and means of transitioning) of EAP practitioners to a scholarship-based identity and role

Call for expressions of interest

If interested in contributing to one of these planned volumes, or for more information, please contact either the Series Editors or Publisher:

Series Editors:

Alex Ding, a.ding@leeds.ac.uk
Ian Bruce, ian.bruce@waikato.ac.nz
Melinda Whong, lcmwhong@ust.hk

Publisher:

Maria Giovanna Brauzzi,
maria.brauzzi@bloomsbury.com

